30. The post was made without authorization from Dr. Bell and without attribution to Dr. Bell.

32. As of November 14, 2015, the post had received 206 "Retweets" and 189 "Likes." Due to the globally accessible nature of Twitter, the post was accessible by Internet users across the world.

33. The post was a "retweet" of a post by NSU Baseball (@NSUBaseball32). The @NSUBaseball32 Twitter handle is used by Northeastern State University's RiverHawks baseball team.

34. Dr. Bell sent a Cease and Desist letter to Northeastern State University ("NSU") which was signed for by NSU on September 27, 2016. Shortly thereafter, NSU removed the original post, automatically removing all retweets of the post. The post was therefore accessible on @jeff_knarr's Twitter page for at least 10 months and 21 days.

35. Defendant Jeffery Knarr is the Head Football Coach for Defendant King's College, and has held this position since February 11, 2010 (according to the King's College website at <http://www.kingscollegeathletics.com/coaches.aspx?rc=934>, accessed on August 31, 2017).

The second instance was at the end of the post, with the mark shown in letters which were emphasized by being capitalized, bold, underlined, and followed by three exclamation points.

49. The Twitter post lacked Plaintiff’s name, and some readers of the post are likely to be confused so as to infer that the text shown in the post was originated by either of the Defendants or by NSU Baseball, rather than by Plaintiff

50. Defendants have infringed the Plaintiff’s right to be identified and distinguished from others through use of the trademark.

51. Defendants’ willful and deliberate acts described above have caused injury and damages to Plaintiff and have caused injury to Plaintiff’s goodwill.

60. The Defendants used Plaintiff's trademark in the Twitter post without the Plaintiff's knowledge or permission, and without attribution to Plaintiff.

61. The Twitter post lacked Plaintiff's name, and some readers of the post were likely to be confused so as to infer that the text shown in the post was originated by either of the Defendants or by NSU Baseball, rather than by Plaintiff, thereby passing off the text as that of Defendants.

62. The Defendants included Plaintiff's trademark twice in the Twitter post. The first instance was as the title of the post, with the mark shown in letters which were emphasized by being capitalized, bold, and underlined. The second instance was at the end of the post, with the mark shown in letters which were emphasized by being capitalized, bold, underlined, and followed by three exclamation points.

63. Defendants have violated the Plaintiffs right to exclusive use of the trademark.

64. By failing to seek and obtain permission to use text from Plaintiff's book, "Winning Isn't Normal", Defendants have engaged in unfair competition by passing off the text as theirs and obtained a windfall by using without compensating Plaintiff for that which they were legally obligated to pay.

65. Defendants' willful and deliberate acts described above have caused injury and damages to Plaintiff and have caused injury to Plaintiff's goodwill.

66. As a direct and proximate result of said acts by Defendants, Plaintiff is entitled to damages in an amount to be proven at trial.
